TOO LONG A JOURNEY. Surprised Traveler Refused to

Walt for Chicago. Refere the train for the West had fairly pulled out of the depot at Jersey City, all the passengers in the day coach knew the elderly gentleman in the front seat was bound for Chicago. Also that he bad left his home in Limerick two weeks before to join his son "Tommy," whom he had not seen in twenty years. Sundry bags, boxes, seen in twenty years. Sundry bags, boxes, and packages that completely filled the used and packages that completely filled the used and prepared for the fourney. He seemed as happy as a schoolboy when he spoke of meeting his boy in Chicago. As the first movement of the train denoted that the long ride had begun he was bubbling over with the delightful anticipation of the pleasure in store for him. Again and again he told how "Tommy" had left home for "Ameriky" when sixteen years old, settled in Chicago, earned lots of money and finally sent transportation to his old dad to join him in the Western metropolis.

When the train was out a half hour or When the train was out a half hour or more the old gentleman became anxious, peering out of the window and changing from one seat to another. Finally the conductor came through for tickets, and the Chicago passenger enquired of him if they were near his station yet. The conductor smiled and shook his head. The train stopped at a small fown in western New Jersey and the mans face brightened up as he asked a young woman seated close by if it was Chicago. He became more and more nervous as the train started up again. Passengers who had been interested in their newspapers and maxazines laid them aside to watch the antics of the old man. Whenever the train slowed he would start from his seat to know if they had finally reached the big town where his son was waiting for him.

big town where his son was waiting for him.

Finally, as the train pulled into the beautiful Broad Street Station at Philadelphia, a majority of those in the coach prepared to leave the train, and with them the man from Limerick. The conductor, who saw him get off, waiked up to him and said. 'This isn't your station. Your ticket calls for Chicago. You have a long ride in front of you yet. "Ain't this Chicago?" 'No. You must travel all the rest of the afternoon, all night tonight, and nearly all day tomorrow before you reach Chicago." The face of the man from the Green isle was a study. He looked at the man in uniform for fully a minute, apparently trying to grasp the meaning of the words he had just heard. Then he said. "I-must-travel-all-the-rest-of-the-day, all-night-tonight-and-all-day - tomorrow you must, said the conductor. 'Well,' said he. Till be dommed if I.go. And he didn't. Nothing the conductor could say fo him yould grake him set aboard. -before 1-reach-Chicago?" "Of course you must," said the conductor, "Well," said he. "I'll be dommed if I go." And he didn't. Nothing the conductor could say to him would make him get aboard the train again. The last seen of him, when the cars rounded the curve outside the station, he was making his way to-ward the waiting room.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.
